

1. Resolution

The resolution is the final outcome of an MUN session. It is a written document that outlines the solutions to the problems discussed in the committee. A resolution typically includes the preamble, the operative clauses, and the signatures of the delegates who have supported it.

The preamble of the resolution provides the background and context for the issue at hand. It outlines the history and the current state of the problem, highlighting any relevant international laws, treaties, or agreements.

The operative clauses of the resolution are the main part of the document, where the solutions to the issue are presented. The clauses should be clear and concise, outlining specific actions to be taken to address the problem. The clauses should also take into account the views and opinions of all stakeholders involved and should be realistic and feasible to implement. Once the operative clauses have been discussed and agreed upon, the resolution is ready for voting. If the resolution is passed by a majority vote, it becomes an official document that outlines the solutions to the issue at hand.

Preambulatory Clauses:

The preamble of a draft resolution states the reasons for which the committee is addressing the topic and highlights past international action on the issue. Each clause begins with a present participle (called a perambulatory phrase) and ends with a comma. Preambulatory clauses could include the following:

- 1. References to the UN Charter;
- 2. Citations of past UN resolutions or treaties on the topic under discussion;
- 3. Mentions statements made by the Secretary-General or a relevant UN body or agency;
- 4. Recognition of the efforts of regional or nongovernmental organizations in dealing with the issue;
- 5. General statements on the topic, its significance, and its impact;
- 6. Each preambulatory clause should end with a comma.

Preambulatory Phrases: should be in italics

Operative Clauses:

Operative clauses offer solutions to issues addressed earlier in a resolution through the perambulatory section. These clauses are action-oriented and should include both an underlined verb at the beginning of your sentence, followed by the proposed solution. Each clause should abide by the following principles:

1. Clauses should be numbered;
2. Each clause should support the other and continue to build the solution;
3. Add details to your clauses to have a complete solution;
4. Operative clauses are punctuated by a semicolon, except your last operative clause, which should end with a period.

Operative Phrases: should be bold
